"On first impressions the Niche Zero lives up to the hype, it's compact, quiet and quick which really is all that's needed of a domestic grinder however the more time I've spent with it, the more I'm realising its capabilities and potential for commercial use, it's that good. It's top 3 selling points become apparent incredibly fast; first thing you'll notice is how quiet it is in relation to its competition. Second will be retention which is incredibly low due to the sweeper mechanism (with 0.2g being my average for a Scandinavian roast) and third is the grinders range offering a super fine espresso grind to coarser than would be needed for any immersive brew. For me, it covers all the bases and more, looking forward to seeing this grinder hit the market later this year!"
